US rushes to aid Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO — The Trump admin-istration is rushing military istration is rushing military hardware and personnel into Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands as it becomes increasingly clear that the U.S. government response to Hurricane Maria so far has been inadequate and overmatched by the scale of the disaster. In the first six days after the hurricane made landfall here, the Navy had deployed just three ships, citing concerns that Puerto Rico's ports were too damaged to accommodate numerous large vessels. But numerous large vessels. But harrowing reports of isolated U.S. citizens struggling in the heat without electricity and running low on food and water have now spurred the Penta-gon to throw resources into the relief effort even though they haven't been specifi-cally requested by territorial officials. The more robust approach includes the deployment of the USNS Comfort, a hospital ship that has responded to other natural disasters. The Pentagon also has assigned an Army general as point person for the humanitarian crisis of the humanitarian crisis deputy commanding general of U.S. Army North. He will coordinate operations and assess what other resources

Animal rescue faces challenge after storm

By Susan Smiley-Height

SILVER SPRINGS if losing grant funding because of 9/11 and Hurri-canes Katrina and Harvey, canes Katrma and Harvey, and having to recover from considerable damage from Hurricane Irma were not enough, the Forest Animal Rescue last weekend was told its longtime providers of produce and meat will no longer be able to give them food.

The loss of support from two area Winn-Dixie stores will equate to a roughly $120,000 bill annually for food for the animals – tigers, heave leaves, monkeys bears, lemurs, monkeys, giant bats and tortoises, Patagonian pumas and more – said rescue co-founder Lisa Stoner.

Joe Caldwell, manager, corporate communications, for Southeastern Grocers LLC, the parent company and home of BI-LO, Har-veys, Winn-Dixie and Fresco y Más grocery stores, said the stores are following corporate policy.

"These two stores have simply aligned themselves to our official charitable partners for food, Second Harvest Food Bank, along
